

Dear Honourable Dynast:

Any persons believing themselves to be the rightful Chief of the Name of their Irish clan is implored and expected to petition Prince Díolún for the position via the Lord Herald at tiarna-aralt@ard-riocht.org. Gaelic Lords and Princes can also apply for titles in the Peerage of Ireland. If Gaelic Princes hold a title in the Peerage of Ireland, they can abandon their Gaelic titles, or hold them in conjunction with the Peerage title(s). Petitioners must include the following:

- Contact information;
- Full legal name;
- Preferred name (if applicable);
- Signed oath of fealty to Prince Díolún;
- Video or voice recording of the petitioner swearing fealty to Prince Díolún;
- Genealogical claim;
- Proof that there are no existing senior lines;
- If you are from a junior branch on the basis of primogeniture then you must still be an agnatic descendant of the last duly inaugurated holder of the position, but you must also provide evidence of holding a meeting with all his other agnates and them showing support for your accession to the title;
- MLA format bibliography;
- Curriculum vitae;
- A portrait photograph of the petitioner;
- Send a picture of an official document as proof of identity (we really only need face, full legal name, date of birth, and a picture, so please censor all other information);
- The clan or sept in question must be verifiable;
- Your admitting in writing that you understand recognition may be revoked for reasons including, but not limited to, breaking your oath of fealty, providing misinformation, telling half-truths in this process, and/or simply having a more senior claimant you may not have known about surface;

Applications not containing all required documentation will be discarded.

None of the information received will be redistributed to anywhere or anyone. Chiefs will be chosen based on agnatic primogeniture from the last duly inaugurated chiefs and chieftains. After that, the chief may collaborate with any existing clan associations to decide whether to continue the succession through primogeniture or revert to tanistry.

Genealogical research must be conducted by applicants and cannot, at this time, be conducted by the Crown or its agents. Once all the proper documents and documentation are submitted, the Privy Council will review it and make any last edits or suggestions, before sending it to His Royal Highness Prince Díolún, who will make the final decision on the matter.
